DEPARTMENT HEADS, ELECTED OFFICIALS AND EMPLOYEES

County Auditor Eric Van Lancker reminded the Board it would meet tomorrow to canvass the votes from the Primary Election. He said it appears plans have been made for the Board to meet the week of the County Fair on Thursday, July 18, at 10 a.m. Van Lancker reported the new firm conducting the County’s annual audit is on site today and tomorrow.

County Treasurer Johnson reported the tax sale has been published and the website for it is updated.

County Engineer Todd Kinney said the old 61 bridge project south of DeWitt is being led by Scott County. He said the pier pilings are mostly in and then the slab can be poured. He said they lost six days due to flooding. He said it will take all summer to complete, but they are on schedule. He said the roadside weed spraying is complete.

DISCUSSION WITH POSSIBLE ACTION

Proposal for a Moratorium on Wind Turbine Applications in the County: Chairman Irwin said after multiple discussions last week he reached out to County Attorney Mike Wolf about a moratorium on the wind turbine projects. He said he asked this for two reasons, and one was that there is a group working on updating the ordinances and they are under pressure without a deadline. He said the second reason is because there appears to be another developer looking around the Elwood area for a second wind turbine development. He said he wants the residents in the County to know the Board is listening and taking in all the information on both sides of the issue. Supervisor Srp said he was caught off guard as it was previously determined not to have a moratorium. He said he has had many conversations with residents. He said he supports the ordinance being updated. Supervisor George said she was also surprised but was considering the moratorium again recently. She said that would be a respectful move by the Board so everyone can provide their input. Tim Arnold, NextEra representative, said they have 13 systems in the state including a training and repair facility. He said they feel strongly about their partnerships in the state to create jobs. He said they believe in being good neighbors. He said they are reaching out to find out who is interested in partnering with NextEra. Arnold said they have agreements with dozens of landowners because they feel it is best for their family, business and community. He said the ordinance in place is comprehensive and does not restrict their project. He said it does support the rights of the landowners. He said the setback requirements currently are designed to be responsive to changing technologies. He said the sound requirements are strong and will protect neighbors in the area. Arnold said decommissioning and road maintenance are concerns and said the application process requires stipulations addressing those issues. He said NextEra has partnered with the County on the solar project near Grand Mound so they are comfortable with the requirements for road maintenance. Irwin said NextEra has been good about working on road concerns around the Grand Mound project. Swati Dandeker of Bright Future Iowa said they work in several Iowa counties to promote a good policy that works for the landowners and their neighbors. She said property owners' rights are important, but it must be within good policy. She said the current wind ordinance is very good but does not have anything that addresses flicker issues. Kenny O'Conner said he has signed with NextEra. He said it could significantly have a positive impact on the community. He said it will benefit school districts and the County. He said many of the side effect complaints are created by social media and are not true. He said most of those concerns are addressed by the developer. He said windmills have a small footprint and allow for farming activities to continue. Liz Silva of Power Iowa Clinton County Coalition said these projects provide good paying jobs in rural Iowa. She said they become big taxpayers to support schools and the County. She asked the Board not to put a moratorium on the projects. Dennis Greve said the windmills contain a lot of rare earth metals from materials not mined in this part of the world but those mines are abominations. He said the blades have a 10-year lifespan and are made of fiberglass which he said cannot be recycled. He said this is a unique part of Iowa's environment and is concerned about the bird population, especially eagles and hawks. He doesn't see the benefits outweighing the costs and he said that goes deeper than the pocketbook. Ryan Drew, business representative for the operating engineers' union, said they operate heavy equipment and have been working on windmill projects for 15 years in Iowa. He said these jobs keep their members working. He asked that the Board not put in a moratorium as the current ordinance is very good. Joe Farrell farms in Delmar and is retired from the operating engineers' union. He said he has worked on wind farm projects, specifically fixing roads around the projects. He said these jobs would help people get into the work force. Kelli Orton, Clinton County Wind LLC outside counsel, said the ordinance is in good shape and there isn't a need for a moratorium. However if a moratorium is ordered, she requested an exception for the MET towers so when the moratorium is complete the projects would be ready. Jen Kutsch said she is preparing amendments for the ordinance because they are outdated and inconsiderate. She asked for a six-month moratorium because change takes time. She said there is an obligation to future generations as well as wildlife in the area. Rick White, Goose Lake, used to work at the power plant in Clinton which is now gone. He said there are many things to bring up, but he said make sure they are true. He said he's worked at a power plant with no health effects, so the safety is there. He said when you drive into town you drive past and through high voltage lines, some that pass right by residential areas. Michelle Braswell, lives near Charlotte, said the last time she spoke to the Board she asked for time to speak with people and thanked the Board for that. She said there are more than 900 members in their Facebook group. She said they are not the vocal minority as the wind industry may say. She said a study mentioned at a previous meeting that tested college students for a short amount of time is not the same as people who live next to wind turbines. She said one person took 11 years to sell their house and that her and her daughters suffered from headaches. She asked landowners to look at their agreements and read Section 19 that she says if credits aren't available, they can put something else on the property. She said baseline data around the project area should be taken. She said in Adair County there was no process for noise complaints. She cited a study and said according to those formulas more than 24,000 birds can be expected to be killed during the 30-year term of this proposed project. Irwin said any applicant will need to work with Iowa Fish and Wildlife to receive a permit from them. Irwin said that process has caused a proposed project to move further west away from the Mississippi River. Clinton County Attorney Mike Wolf reviewed a draft resolution and ordinance provided to the Board. The process for approving the resolution and ordinance was reviewed. Wolf said it would be best practice to place the moratorium in place for three months at a time. Wolf said he would support a moratorium. Srp wondered if there needs to be a moratorium as the process is being worked through currently. He said a moratorium would stop something from happening but said there is nothing happening in the next several months. Wolf wondered what would happen if the ordinance is changed and it may impact a contract with a landowner. Mary Bartels, Clinton County taxpayer, thanked the Board for taking time to listen to their constituents. She knows there has been a lot of input, but she said the folks speaking out are landowners and adjacent landowners. She said the ordinance includes language stating adjacent landowners. She said they have just as much right to voice concerns as the landowner. She said based on that they should hit the pause button for six months. It was brought up that text amendments cost $100 to file. County Planning and Zoning Director Thomas Barnes said several amendments could be filed under the one-time fee. Barnes said in his time with the County no one has ever filed an amendment to activate the $100 fee. Ray Studeman said he was approached and said no to leasing property. He wondered how many people actually live and farm on that ground. Lana Griswold said the word is getting out and they need time. She said there are not enough people yet that know about what is going on. She said she spoke to a woman who lived on property that would be surrounded on three sides of the project and she didn't know. Dustin Johnson said most folks don't pay attention to county government and the moratorium allows people to learn about the project and let emotions settle down. Mike Carberry of Bright Future Iowa said they have been working in Clinton County for three years on solar and wind. He said he spoke with Wolf about moratoriums, he recommended listing to Wolf and Barnes. He said he works with people in similar positions across the state and they are doing a good job. He said a short moratorium would be a good idea, but it needs to come with goals and a timeline. Arlo Bates, Iowa Land Liberty Coalition, said it is important to protect landowner rights and he believes the current ordinance does just that by allowing adjacent landowners to also participate in the process. Bates said with no applications on the horizon, they think the moratorium sends a bad message to the participating landowners and the developers. TJ Burken, Charlotte resident, wants to make sure the natural resources are protected around the area and being good neighbors to bordering counties.

MOTION by Supervisor George to put into place a three-month moratorium on any wind turbine applications. Srp said he would rather vote on it next week when the County Attorney has better input into the language of a moratorium. He said he's not against a moratorium but wonders if it is needed since applications are months away from being filed. George said things change so she would like to be able to tell everyone, here are the rules everyone is playing by. She wouldn't want someone to sign up if the ordinance is changed. Irwin said Wolf recommended it be put off for a week so everything could be listed in the resolution. George withdrew her motion.

The following resolution was presented and on motion approved:

RESOLUTION 2024-146

WHEREAS, Utility-Scale Wind Facility means a group of wind turbines operated for the primary purpose of wholesale or retail sales of generated electricity, not including consumer scale wind installations that are constructed primarily to provide power for use on-site; and

WHEREAS, the Clinton County Board of Supervisors wishes to enact a moratorium on accepting Renewable Energy Overlay Rezoning applications until the current utility-scale ordinance language is updated to include the aforementioned conditions which incorporates lessons learned from other wind ordinance applications in other Iowa counties; now

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that this moratorium does not include current and future applications for MET towers.

Roll Call: George: Yes; Srp: No; Irwin: Yes.

Courthouse Clock Tower Roof Update: Van Lancker reported County Maintenance Manager Matt Lancaster is still waiting on a second estimate and hopes to have more to report next week.

County Administration Building Project Update: Van Lancker and Irwin said they reviewed the new schedule with Valley Constructions last week. There was one phase that needed to be rescheduled, but it is a smaller section and that could be changed easily. They reported a lot of work can be put on the renovation in the Treasurer's Office area to make sure they are able to move into their area when the curtain wall around the west end of the building is complete. They said Valley Construction can do a lot of the work in the Treasurer's Office through a time and material contract. Van Lancker said the first pay application was submitted this morning.

11:59 A.M. Iowa Drainage District Association (IDDA) Update

John Torbert, Executive Director of the IDDA, provided the Board with a review of the last year in the IDDA. He said IDDA is now hosting two sessions a year. He said one of them was an open discussion agenda and they easily filled the three hours. He said that will happen again on July 18 in Fort Dodge and the annual meeting will be December 6 also in Fort Dodge. He said there were about 20 pieces of legislation they tracked this year, which is about normal. He said one surprise bill that would have added about 21 pages to the drainage laws. IDDA has been involved in a federal grant that addresses drainage conservation. He said when there is an improvement to a district the grant would allow more environmentally friendly opportunities if it is being engineered. He added conservation practices cannot be assessed to the drainage district and that is where the grant will assist. Torbert said a project could also be used to bank water as a wetland.
